Hon'ble Prime Minister's Letter

“.....Many feared that India will become a problem for the world when Corona hits India. But today, through sheer confidence and resilience, you have transformed the way the world looks at us. You have proven that the collective strength and potential of Indians is unparalleled compared even to the powerful and prosperous countries of the world. Be it clapping and lighting a lamp to the honouring of Corona Warriors by India's armed forces, Janta curfew or by faithful adherence to rules during the nationwide lockdown, on every occasion you have shown that Ek Bharat is the guarantee for ShresthaBharat.

In a crisis of this magnitude, it can certainly not be claimed that no one suffered any inconvenience or discomfort. Our labourers, migrant workers, artisans & craftsmen in small scale industries, hawkers and such fellow countrymen have undergone tremendous suffering. We are working in a united and determined way to alleviate their troubles.

However, we have to take care to ensure that inconveniences that we are facing do not turn into disasters. Hence, it is very important for every Indian to follow all rules and guidelines. We have displayed patience so far and we should continue to do so. This is one of the important reasons for India being safer and in a better state than many other countries. This is a long battle but we have started traversing on the path of victory, and victory is our collective resolve.....”

COVID-19 'Step to help understand pattern of the spread of the virus'

Govt mulls religion-based mapping

VIRRAM SHARMA
HYDRABAD, MAY 5

As the deadly novel coronavirus continues to spread rapidly, the Centre is mulling a religion-based mapping to identify hotspots across the country and "understand" the origin and pattern of the spread of the virus community-wise.

The "communal mapping", as some refer to it, appears to be aimed at getting a clearer picture of the approximate number of people belonging to different communities who have contracted the virus, have more chances of getting infected due to living in clusters and the likelihood of them spreading the virus to adjoining localities.

The Centre feels that a data bank of community-wise Covid-19 numbers will help its containment measures and in tackling future pandemics in the country.

Highly placed sources in New Delhi told The Asian Age that the idea for religion-based mapping came up during the recent closed-door meetings of the highest level.

MOVE COMES at a time when BJP leaders have openly blamed Muslims for the rise in coronavirus cases across the country.

Though officially no decision has been taken as for whether or not to go ahead with the proposal, it is unclear if the exercise has already begun unofficially.

"In the near future, if coronavirus cases multiply, like it happened in the US or other parts of the world, religion-based mapping will tell us which community has more chances of spreading the virus further and, accordingly, strict containment measures can be taken in localities or clusters across the country," sources, privy to discussions, said.

Though there have been cases of other religious groups and even foreigners emerging as super-spreaders, including in Punjab, pressure has been focused against Muslims and they have been targeted. There have been several instances of Muslims being attacked, even denied medical care.

If undertaken, the mapping, sources said, will take into account the geography of the area or state, the kind of people and their socio-economic and religious activities, their daily routines and the approximate number of members in the families.

"For all this to happen, state governments will have to cooperate. There is also some amount of skepticism as to how the people will receive this idea, if and when approved, as there are chances of this backfiring on the government," sources said, adding that the government is aware of the criticism that could come its way. There is a perception in some quarters that state governments are not giving out the correct figures of Covid-19 cases.

sources that state governments are not giving out the correct figures of Covid-19 cases.

The proposal to have a religion-based mapping was mooted after citing the examples of Agra in Uttar Pradesh, some pockets in Gujarat, Maharashtra and Delhi which are witnessing increasing number of Covid-19 cases. "There are several reports before the Centre which suggest that the virus is active among scores of people residing in colonies or clusters and they are sitting on a time bomb. It is here that, along with other inputs, religion-based mapping will come in handy for taking adequate containment measures. But that is only in a scenario when the number of cases shoot up," another official said.

Sources said that this data bank will also come handy for tackling pandemics in the future. "Coronavirus has taught us a lesson and now is the time to prepare ourselves with enough data on the origin and pattern of the spread of the virus," they added.

Clarification in respect of residency under the Income-tax Act, 1961

Section 6 of the Income-tax Act, 1961 contains provisions relating to residency of a person. The status of an individual as to whether he is resident in India or a non-resident or not ordinarily resident, is dependent, inter-alia, on the period for which the person is in India during a year. Various representations have been received stating that there are number of individuals who had come on a visit to India during the previous year 2019-20 for a particular duration and intended to leave India before the end of the previous year for maintaining their status as non-resident or not ordinary resident in India. However due to declaration of the lockdown and suspension of international flights owing to outbreak of COVID-19, they are required to prolong their stay in India. Concerns have been expressed that they may involuntarily end up becoming Indian residents without any intention to do so. In order to avoid genuine hardship in such cases, the CBDT has now issued clarification in this regard.
